Whale People: Protectors of the Sea features a 3,000 pound killer whale pole and salmon carvings created by the House of Tears Carvers, and an award-winning outdoor IMAX-style film projection. Produced with Lummi and Tseil-Waututh elders, the exhibition tells the story of today's environmental emergency through the figure of the killer whale, and uplifts the leadership of Native Nations in coming together to protect natural and cultural heritage, the sacred waters, the orcas, the salmon, and our collective future.
